Frank Lima

The artist desired to learn to carve in the early 90s, as an adjunct to his furniture building hobby. Western and wildlife were the subjects. He attended several carving workshops over the years and added clay sculpting and stone carving to his repertoire. After retirement as an attorney at age 70, he, having always wanted to paint, took painting lessons at the Senior Center in Kerrville, Texas, desiring to paint portraits of family and friends, and especially of native Americans, whom he had made carved representations for years. The artist has won numerous ribbons and plaques for his work in the various disciplines
